

CANADIAN CRAFT ONLY ARRIVAL

NORTHEAST STORM YESTERDAY HELD SMALL LOCAL BOATS IN PORT.

Held in port by the northeast storm of yesterday, none of the small shore trawlers, draggers, or gill netters fished during the day, and the local market is bare of seafood this forenoon, as a result. The only arrival reported was the British boat Tagati from Nova Scotian ports, with a load of canned goods and salt fish, the latter divided between Frank E. Davis company and the F. C. Pearce company. The canned goods were for the Frank E. Davis company.

FIVE SEINERS LEFT TO GO

Only five of the seining fleet are left in port, and the news this morning that mackerel had been caught off of the Jersey coast, will probably hasten the departure of these five. They are the Col. Lindbergh, St. Providenza, II., Marietta and Mary, Mary F. Curtis, and Constellation.

Fresh Halibut Stock.

Sch. Orelha F. Spinney, Capt. Carl Olsen, on her recent halibut fare landed at Boston, stocked $6500, and the crew each shared $148.

SEINER LANDS FIRST MACKEREL TRIP OUT SOUTH

Seiners found fish last night off of the Jersey coast! That's the word the boys along the waterfront have been waiting to hear since the first of the fleet sailed last week for Cape May. And it was a most welcome announcement for owners of the boats numbering 50 or more at Cape May, who have been on tip-toe waiting for the first strike.

Last night seven of the local fleet went out in search of fish. The only arrival heard from was the St. Rita, Capt. Frank Favoloro, which brought into Wildwood, N. J., 30 barrels of seven-inch fish caught about 80 miles south of Cape May breakwater.
